SCOPE OF SERVICES: The University of Chicago Internet Project (CUIP) through its Web Institute for Teachers (WIT) will train 300 CPS classroom teachers, during summer 2003, to develop and deliver technology integrated curriculum in a classroom setting. WIT will provide 80 hours of instruction to each participant over a three (3) week period and provide a variety of learning experiences designed to help participants integrate the World Wide Web into their teaching and learning. Instruction will be conducted in "homerooms" of 20 participants, grouped according to prior experiences with the Internet and the integration of the Internet resources into the classroom. "Homeroom" instruction is to be conducted by two experienced teacher-mentors who are former WIT program participants and specially trained to serve as WIT mentors. A series of "plenary sessions" will bring together the participants in all of the "homerooms" for lectures and demonstrations by leaders in the field of instructional technology. The entire WIT curriculum is made available and remains available on-line, so participants can continue to use these WIT materials as a reference. WIT supplies each participant with an Internet account on its server, allowing space for web pages and other materials to be stored, and facilitates online communication between the mentors and other participants. These server accounts will be maintained for at least a year following the Institute, to support ongoing practice and classroom use of materials created during the Summer 2003 Institute.
