Chicago Board of Education Approves Resolution Affirming Community Engagement in the CEO/Superintendent Search Application Period Opens Today, April 25

CHICAGO – At its regular meeting on Thursday, April 24, 2025, the Chicago Board of Education unanimously approved a resolution launching the search for the next CEO/Superintendent of Chicago Public Schools (CPS). The resolution emphasizes the Board’s commitment to engaging CPS stakeholders—including students, staff, administrators, and the broader community—throughout the process.

Applications for the position open today, April 25, allowing candidates to apply before the school year ends.

The Board is committed to selecting a leader who upholds educational excellence, equity, and accountability. As outlined in a resolution passed on March 20, 2025, candidates must hold a valid Illinois Professional Educator License with a Superintendent endorsement—or an equivalent credential from another state.

Engaging with CPS and Stakeholders

Community voice will be instrumental in helping the Board refine the job posting and shape a comprehensive leadership profile that highlights the District and outlines key priorities and goals for the next CEO/Superintendent. Following the completion of the initial community engagement, the Board will review the findings in collaboration with its executive search firm, Alma Advisory Group, and make the report publicly available.

“The Board is taking the search for our next CEO/Superintendent very seriously,” said Board President Sean B. Harden. “We feel it’s important to authentically engage the community in the search process. The lived experiences of the CPS community and Chicagoans will shape the way we think about the role, and the ways in which we will interview potential candidates.”

Although a vote on the resolution isn’t legally required to start the search process, the Board believes it’s important to formally express its unity and commitment to a collaborative approach. The vote also demonstrates the Board's consensus on the role's key responsibilities and the skills it will prioritize in the search. This marks a pivotal moment for the city, as the nation's largest public school governing body begins the process of selecting the next CEO/Superintendent of CPS.

"The diversity within our Board creates an opportunity for greater parent, student, and community voice and representation to the District's leadership," said Board Member and Transition Team Chair Jessica Biggs. "Our first opportunity to demonstrate this strength will be in the way we carry out this search. It's a charge that we take very seriously."

How to Get Involved

There will be multiple ways that the CPS community and Chicagoans can be involved in the weeks ahead, including:

- Community gatherings: During the month of May, each of the ten elected school board districts will host a community gathering where the public will be invited to attend and give their input.
- Focus groups: The District will conduct interviews and focus groups with teachers, students, principals, staff, union leaders, and community partners to allow for deeper discussions.
- Community survey: The Board will issue a community survey to gather feedback broadly.

The Board will provide a schedule for each community gathering event on its website CPSBOE.org, along with updates about the search.
